SleepScore Labs and WSI brands are now partnering to offer the Robin Sleep System, a combination of the SleepScore Max and Robin Pocket Spring Mattress Set, available online and in select stores including Pottery Barn, Pottery Barn Kids, PBteen, West Elm and Williams Sonoma Home. This integration addresses the growing role sleep plays in consumers’ lives as a critical component of a balanced lifestyle.

“The Robin Sleep System is where sleep and innovation meet. The world’s most advanced non-contact sleep monitor pairs with the comfortable and proven Robin mattress to help millions achieve high quality sleep,” said Colin Lawlor, CEO of SleepScore Labs. “It’s an honor to be the first consumer-sleep tech device in the Williams-Sonoma, Inc. home furnishing stores, and to combine our goals to foster healthier lifestyles through sleep.”

The SleepScore Max is designed to measure sleep in detail, including the quality and quantity of sleep while it rests on a nightstand. The non-contact device was instrumental in testing and evaluating the Robin mattress sets in bringing the best sleep. Over 80 percent of participants surveyed by SleepScore Labs about the new Robin Pocket Spring Mattress reported falling asleep more easily and waking up without trouble in the morning. Additionally, over 50 percent of participants mentioned a substantial improvement in their sleep quality.

“We partnered with SleepScore Labs because of their vision and commitment to improving sleep quality and wellness through innovative solutions, which is core to our newly introduced Robin brand,” said Laura Alber, President and CEO of Williams-Sonoma, Inc. “Together, we are excited to educate and inspire customers with an assortment of thoughtfully designed products that deliver a meaningful wellness experience.”
